The workshop will explore 'projection' as related to our body and the space we project in. How do we experience an internal space, the architecture of our body? How do we experience the relationship of the body and the room? By exploring our body in space we expand our idea of how a projection can be used – as related to the body and the space we project in.

The workshop will culminate in a performace/installation which will grow out of our explorations.

Ursula Scherrer's aesthetic training began with dance, transitioned to choreography and then photography. In the medium of multichannel video performances/installations she found the possibility for synthesis of the moving body in space and imagery.
